

Online risks

RSHE - Online and media : Harmful content

Mrs Ford

Fake news?

Read the headlines below. Do you think they are fake news or not?

Our Prime Minister is a robot!

The Daily News has evidence to share today showing that our Prime Minister is, in fact, a robot! Pictures shared with Daily News show the PM rolling up his sleeves to show a robotic arm! Unfortunately, the PM's office has banned us from sharing the images with you. Trust us, it's true!

Credit: Pixabay

Fake news?

Read the headlines below. Do you think they are fake news or not?

Our Prime Minister is a robot!

Fake news! You are being provided with no evidence to support the claim. The paper alleges to have pictures but has not shared them with the reader. Usually with stories about the Prime Minister, a news outlet will ask for comments from Number 10. This article hasn't done that.

Credit: Pixabay

Fake news?

Read the headlines below. Do you think they are fake news or not?

Schools will close at 12:30 everyday

The Secretary of State for Education has pleased the nation's parents (but not their children) by announcing that all schools will shut each day at 12.30. Children will be expected to go straight from school to their house. The government has said all children should complete chores in their house each afternoon to give more free time to parents.

Credit: Pixabay

Fake news?

Read the headlines below. Do you think they are fake news or not?

Schools will close at 12.30 everyday

Any big news stories from the government will have information on their Gov.uk website for you to check the facts. This article does not link to the website. The government are also not responsible for the chores that you do at home so could not impose this on you. You should also check your school's web page for any information about the school day.

Credit: Pixabay

Fake news?

Read the headlines below. Do you think they are fake news or not?

Haggis flown into space

Yesterday, in celebration of Burns Night, a haggis has been launched into space. A Scottish butcher wanted to cheer the Scottish people up by sending the first haggis more than 20 miles up on a weather balloon. The haggis landed safely back at its launch destination within a few hours. Mr Howie, the butcher, said he wanted to “give everyone some much needed cheer”.

Credit: Pixabay

Fake news?

Read the headlines below. Do you think they are fake news or not?

Haggis flown into space

This article cited the man who sent the haggis into space. He gave a quote for the piece, showing his support. You can also search this piece and find 302,000 search results. If you compare the articles, you can find the articles are all similar in the information shared.

Credit: Pixabay

