Good Listening

Lesson 9 of 14 on Attention and Listening

Emma Jones

The parts of the body we use to listen

- Eyes for looking
- Ears for listening to what is being said
- Body for staying in one place
- Feet and hands need to be still
- Heads for thinking about what is being said

Making a Good Listening Poster

What do I need?

Paper

Scissors

Glue

Colouring pencils/pens

Pencil/pen

Pictures of eyes/ears/body/hands/feet/head

What to do:

1. Talk about the parts of the body used for listening (find/draw pictures/point to and show parts on the child and your body)
2. Stick the pictures onto an outline of a person
3. Label the pictures
4. If you like, you could even write how we use them for listening
5. Decorate the poster!

Activities for Listening

Ready, steady, blow football!

We need :

2 straws

2 cups

2 paper balls

How to play:

1. Wait until you say 'ready, steady, blow'.
2. Both use your straws to blow a ball into the goal posts (the 2 cups).
3. Remember we need to use our eyes and our ears. Remember to use your good looking and good listening poster.
4. Repeat and take turns saying 'ready, steady...'

Stop and Go cars

Clear a space.

Pretend you are driving a car.

When you say go everyone can drive off (show the action/make the sound).

When you say stop they have to wait in their car at the traffic lights.

Take turns saying 'ready, steady..'

Activities for Listening

Stop and Go movements

Clear a space.

Pretend give a direction for a movement
e.g. jump on the spot

When you say go everyone starts jumping.

When you say stop they have to stop.

Take turns saying 'ready, steady...'

Run and Touch!

This is best played outside.

Identify 4 or 5 different things outside e.g.
a tree, climbing frame, chair and shed.

When you say go everyone has to run and touch the thing you name.

Take turns saying 'Run and touch the....'
