Perfect tense with haben

To use the past tense you need TWO parts:
a form of haben in the present tense and a past participle

Part One:

ich habe

I have

er/sie/es hat

he/she/it has

wir haben

we have

You will have seen and used haben a lot already.

Perfect tense with haben

Part two

You now need a past participle, this must go at the end of the sentence (not like in English)

To form a regular past participle:

1. take the en off the infinitive of the verb
2. add a T
3. add a 'GE' to the front
4. now you have a past participle

Beware of irregular past participles. Can you name any?

hören → hör → hört → gehört

machen → mach → macht → gemacht

Now you have refreshed your memory on how past participles work, can you tell me the past participle for:

1. spielen
2. tanzen
3. faulenzen

1. gespielt 2. getanzt 3. gefaulenzt

Can you tell me which two parts are needed for the perfect tense with haben?

A form of haben and a past participle

Can you tell me where the past participle goes?

At the end of the sentence

Can you add the form of haben and the past participle?

1. Ich habe Tee gekocht (kochen)

2. Wir haben Pommes gekauft (kaufen)

3. Er hat am Samstag Fußball gespielt (spielen)

4. Wir haben gestern gefaulenzt (faulenzten)

5. Leider hat das Essen ekelhaft geschmeckt (schmecken - to taste)

Remember you need the present tense of haben and the past participle begins with 'ge' and ends with 't'

Feedback: Give me 5!

1. What are the two parts needed for the past tense?
2. Can you give three examples of REGULAR past participles?
3. Where does a past participle go in a sentence?
4. How do you form a regular past participle?
5. Translate: I bought beef steak with chips, it was tasty.

Form of haben and a past participle

gespielt / gehört/ gemacht / gefaulenzt

At the end of the sentence

Take the infinitive, take off the en, add t to the end and ge to the beginning

Ich habe Rindersteak mit Pommes gekauft, es war lecker.
