Definite Articles

Using definite articles 'el' and 'la'

- All nouns have a gender in Spanish.
- Spanish has two genders: masculine and feminine.
- To say 'the' before a noun, use 'el' or 'la'.
- 'el' and 'la' are translated into English as 'the'.

Indefinite Articles

Using indefinite articles 'un' and 'una'

- All nouns have a gender in Spanish.
- Spanish has two genders: masculine and feminine.
- To say 'a' or 'an' before a noun, use 'un' or 'una'.
- 'Un' and 'una' are translated into English as 'a' or 'an'.

The use of 'hay'

To say 'there is' or 'there are', Spanish uses the word 'hay'.

Sentences with 'hay' often start with 'en'.

- En la ciudad hay una plaza.
- En el pueblo hay un ayuntamiento.
- En la plaza hay una tienda.

'No hay' means 'there isn't' or 'there aren't'.

- No hay (una) biblioteca.
- No hay (una) oficina de correos.

Difference from English!

Note: After 'no' you can leave out the article, so you may hear both of these:

No hay piscina.

No hay una piscina.

There isn't a swimming pool.

Summary

- 'El' and 'la' both mean the in English and are called definite articles.
- 'Un' and 'una' both mean 'a' or 'an' and are called indefinite articles.
- To say 'there is' or 'there are' we use the word hay and it often appears in sentences beginning with 'en'.
