Prepositions which take the accusative

There are 7 key prepositions which take the accusative case. They are listed here alphabetically - almost!

bis

until, til

durch

through für

for gegen

against

ohne

without

um around

entlang

along

But are these alphabetical?

Not quite! The preposition 'entlang' is placed at the end of the list because it is usually placed after the noun to which it refers (and often at the end of a sentence)

Ich gehe um die Ecke.

I go around the corner

Ich gehe die Straße entlang.

I go along the street.

Accusative endings

	masc	fem	neuter	plural
Def. article	den n	die	das	die
Indef. article	ein en	eine	ein

Remember the appropriate personal pronouns in the accusative

mich	dich	ihn	sie	uns	sie
me	you	him	her	us	them

Schreiben: Translation

Translate the following short paragraph into German. You will need to use

- Your knowledge of prepositions taking the accusative
- The vocabulary from today's lesson

Jörg is homeless and has to sleep on the streets. That can be depressing for him. He often wanders around the town centre without food or shelter and waits until the morning. Then he goes to the homeless centre. Nobody* is against him here. He can shower and eat and people help him with his search for work. Afterwards he goes along the streets to find a place to sleep.

Nobody - niemand

until the morning. Then he goes to the homeless centre. Nobody* is against him here. He can shower and eat and people help him with his search for work.
Afterwards he goes along the streets to find a place to sleep.

Remember the position of 'entlang'

Use 'man' here

This needs an 'um...zu' clause (in order to)
