Hi Charlie. Did you have a good day?

Conversation Games

Microphone game

Choose a topic. Pass a toy microphone around the group. Only when you have the microphone can you say something about that topic.

Show and tell

Ask 1 child in the group to present something important to them e.g. show a photo of their pet. Other children in the group to ask a question e.g. what is the name of your pet, what does it eat, where does it live, how old is it etc.?

Pass the object

Take objects from a bag, and pass them 1 by 1 around the group – each person must say something about that object.

Staying in the category

Play my grandmother went to market / my monster sandwich / I went to the beach and saw etc. Each person adds a relevant item and recalls the ones other people have said e.g. My grandmother went to mark and bought a cake, my grandmother went to market and bought a cake, a pint of milk... etc.

My news

Giving news & then asking each other and answering questions about their news

Top Tips

Strategies

- When the child changes the subject unexpectedly, you can say something like “Wait a minute! We were talking about pizza. You changed the topic.”
- Give them a choice “Are we talking about pizza or what we did at the weekend”.
- Provide scaffolding; You can repeat questions or remind a child "I was asking about..." or "I'm interested in knowing more about..." to get back to the topic of conversation.
- Model being a good conversational partner by responding appropriately to children's comments and questions and demonstrating active listening when they engage you in conversation
- Take advantage of ALL times of the day - snack and lunch are great times to have informal conversations with one or a small group of children.
